

Meagan Salma has been a dance educator for 15 years. She began her dance training at the age of 7 and continued to dance competitively throughout her teen years. She graduated from Montclair State University with a BA in Dance Education and received her formal certification to teach dance in public schools K-12. In addition, she was the recipient of the “MSU Dance Education Award” for her outstanding achievements during her college career as a dance education major.

Meagan showcased on the B.E.T network while performing with a hip hop group. Additional performances included touring at venues throughout the metropolitan area, Boston, Washington D.C., Ohio, and San Francisco. Meagan went on to create and fully implement the curriculum for a new middle and high school dance program at Mary Help of Christians Academy in North Haledon, NJ. She now teaches and choreographs for various studios and continues to advance her professional career by regularly attending dance teacher workshops and conferences. Meagan encourages her students to focus on their individual strengths, both physically and creatively. Her combined love of teaching and creating has given her the ability to inspire this love of dance in her students.
